J.D.C. To Train Native Social Workers In France

The Joint Distribution Committee opened in Versailles, France, its Paul Baerwald School of Social Work. The school, named for Paul Baerwald, seventy-eight-year-old retired banker, now honorary chairman of the J.D.C., will seek to supply to European and North African Jewish communities—for the first time since Hitler rose to power—a group of trained social workers qualified to aid the needy in their respective countries.

Mr. Baerwald, in an interview at the J. D. C. offices, 270 Madison Avenue, New York, indicated that as the number of native social workers increased, the J.D.C. would gradually withdraw its staffs from European countries, leaving the question of local assistance to native personnel.

Funds for the school, amounting to $250,000 for a three-and-one-half-year program, were received by the J.D.C. in the form of bequests and do not come under the organization's regular budget. Last year the J. D. C. spent an estimated $70,600,700, most of which came from the United Jewish Appeal.

The school, to be housed in a chateau owned by the Polignac family, was named for Mr. Baerwald in recognition of the leading role he has played in the J.D.C. since its founding in 1914. Mr. Baerwald was unwilling to discuss his philanthropies over the years, says the New York Herald Tribune, but he has been treasurer and chairman of the organization. Now, nominally in retirement since he relinquished the organization's chairmanship to Edward M. M. Warburg in 1941, he comes to the office every day.

Mr. Kahn, who originated [illegible] explained that Mr. Baerwald continually suggested policies and improvements. "Invariably his suggestions are adopted because of their wisdom and merit," Mr. Warburg added. "It was said at the J.D.C. offices that although Mr. Baerwald had been active in Jewish affairs for three decades, this was the first time he had granted an interview.

Mr. Baerwald noted that the desire of the J.D.C. to reduce its expenditures in Europe as soon as the various communities were able to care for themselves, was similar to what happened during the period of World War I. In 1914 the organization spent $61,000. This figure rose to $11,159,264 in 1920 and then dropped over the years to $340,815 just before Hitler came to power. After World War II, when the needs of Europe's Jews were at their peak, the J.D.C. spent $72,298,651.

Students entering the school—there will be thirty-two in the first class — receive their tuition and travelling expenses and additional funds for their families. They agree before their training to return to their native lands and engage actively both in social work and in the training of others to carry on.

The students, Mr. Baerwald explained, must learn, among other things, Jewish history, culture and sociology, as well as the latest American techniques in individual service, community organization and the social sciences. The faculty, consisting of seven full time instructors, will be aided by lectures by the many members of the present J.D.C. staff of 200 in Europe. Dr. Henry Selver, an educator and welfare worker, will be director of the school.

Participating in the dedication services were U. S. Ambassador David K. Bruce; Baron Guy de Rothschild, president of the French Consistoire; Chief Rabbi Isaie Schwartz, of France; Emile Najahr, counsellor to the Israeli delegation; Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, chairman of J.D.C. European Executive Council; and Moses A. Leavitt, J.D.C. executive vice-chairman.

Scores Under-Play On Good News Of Israel

Gottlieb Hammer, executive director of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, assailed Jewish sources, which he refused to name, for giving out statements that resulted in "pessimism and defeatism" in newspaper stories about Israel.

Saying that he and his group were as much to blame as the other Jewish organizations, he asserted that the American press, while presenting the serious phases of Israel's problems, had tended "to underplay the constructive achievements of the new state."

Just returned from a three-week tour of Israel, Mr. Hammer spoke at the agency's headquarters at 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, New York.

"The very serious situation (in Israel) has been played up to a point," he said, "where some people were beginning to feel that this whole enterprise was going to collapse and that the young State of Israel would be choked up and completely overwhelmed.

"There is no imputation of faulty reporting or of distorting facts that have been presented to the press at various times and at various places. The allegation is that these facts, from whatever sources—and I'm not prepared to name them—have not given to the press a completely rounded picture of the situation."

Mr. Hammer said he did not want to deny the existence of a "crisis", but was anxious to set it into its "proper perspective" and to "straighten out some of the distortions. The problem of immigration, for instance, Mr. Hammer said to the New York Times, has been termed a matter of "life and death."

"It is a matter of personal concern to the immigrants themselves," he said. "It is a matter of concern to the voluntary reorganizations whose responsibility it is to care for these people. It is not necessarily a matter of life and death for the State of Israel. The State of Israel, in my judgment, could very easily survive the so-called economic crisis.

"I don't blame the United Jewish Appeal and I do not blame the press. I blame ourselves, if you will, for failing to project all the facts. A presentation of the sad side of the story, while essentially correct, may be misinterpreted if it is left standing by itself. There ought to be the other side of the picture."

FIRST FIVE YEARS CRITICAL, CLAIMS WEIZMANN

President Chaim Weizmann appealed to Jews in the United States to help Israel through her immigration crisis and warned against acceptance of the theory that now that the state had been established it could "fend for itself."

Speaking to United Jewish Appeal leaders at his home in Rehovoth, Israel, Dr. Weizmann said the first five years of the state's existence would be critical. He added that, "Israel is surrounded by enemies who are still talking of a second round; I see that every king or kinglet is trying to tell us what he will or will not permit us to do."

"We have to be prepared and the only preparation is people," he continued. "Our best defense is to fill the country with people. If we maintain our immigration and settlement work there will be no necessity for military action for defense."

Says Allied Neglect Spurs Exodus From North Africa

Anticipation of new difficulties resulting from the failure of the United Nations to give proper consideration to minority rights guarantees in Libya when that former Italian Colony changes status, has given new impetus to the mass exodus of Jews from Jewish communities in North Africa dating back to biblical times, Dr. Maurice L. Perlzweig, special representative in international affairs of the World Jewish Congress, said at a press conference at headquarters in New York.

Dr. Perlzweig, formerly of Goel Tzedec Synagogue, in Toronto, who had been appointed by the Tripolitanian Jewish community as its representative during the debates on the Italian colonies held at Lake Success last year, returned from a visit to Tripolitania where he investigated the situation of the Jewish community in preparation for the discussions on the future of the Italian colonies by the United Nations General Assembly. He disclosed that $100,000 monthly, supplied by American Jewish relief agencies, was being supplied to facilitate emigration to Israel.

"The Jews, and this applies also to other minorities, are completely without confidence in the proposed arrangement for the future of these territories which have emerged from the discussions among several of the great powers," Dr. Perlzweig said.

"If any thought has been given to the problem of human rights or to the protection of minorities, no evidence of it has appeared in any of the statements which have been made. The great powers seem to be concerned only with questions of sovereignty and strategy. The question is now being asked in these colonies, and not by Jews alone, whether the Western advocacy of human rights is only a tactical instrument in the 'cold war,' or whether it represents an integral part of the policy of Western democratic powers."

Pointing out that nothing has been done to prepare Libya for real self-government, Dr. Perlzweig said: "The establishment of what is really a petty despotism in Cyrenaica has not in this connection been very helpful. By no stretch of the imagination can the new system in Cyrenaica be described as democratic. The Emir 'enacts' a constitution on the authority of a foreign power, proceeds to appoint his own ministers and legislature, which holds office at his pleasure. It is hardly possible to conceive of anything really less democratic. It will not do in Tripolitania, where there is a somewhat higher level of development, and where there are at least 40,000 Italians, not to speak of other minorities. It will take a few years to develop even readiness for self-government.

"During these few years the members of Jewish and other minorities who desire to do so, should have the opportunity of leaving the country," Dr. Perlzweig said. "However, those who desire to go should be given the right to take their property with them."

He announced that the World Jewish Congress will present a two-fold claim to the United Nations, the recognition of the right to emigrate with transfers of property, and the international recognition of safeguarding of human rights of all those who elect to stay. "The faith of many minorities in the United Nations will stand or fall with the fulfilment or denial of this claim," Dr. Perlzweig warned.

Leader Was Originator In Orchestra Field

Mark Warnow, radio orchestra leader, who was featured on the NBC program, "Your Hit Parade," died of a heart ailment an hour after being admitted to the Polyclinic Hospital, in New York, for a check up. He was 47 years old.

He had returned to his suite in the New Weston Hotel, having given the 493rd "Hit Parade" broadcast the previous night in Richmond, Va., at the first Annual Tobacco Bowl Festival. Just before retiring he said that he felt exhausted.

Born in Monastrischt, Russia, Mr. Warnow was brought to New York at the age of five. Two years later he received his first violin lesson from his father, a diamond merchant. After attending grammar school and the Eastern District High School, he studied music at the Volpe Institute. Soon he was leading Salvation Army bands, amateur groups of the Brooklyn Orchestra Society and, at 19, the orchestra for the Marcel Opera Company, says the New York Times.

At one stage of this early period he won a musical competition and was entitled to choose between a gold watch and a dress suit. He chose the suit so that he could make his debut as a conductor in style.

"If it weren't for radio I'd probably be a starving fiddle player now," he said in 1941. "You go along and then something hits you and you suddenly become box-office. You've just got to be there when something happens."

"It was a Morton Downey program back in 1932," he continued. "The conductor took sick and a substitute was needed immediately. Three boys in the band volunteered, but I didn't say a word. You see, it was nice having a regular pay check again and I didn't want to risk losing my job." (He had previously lost a job through too eager volunteering.)

"But the other boys couldn't handle opera and were turned down. Twenty-five minutes before the show went on I asked for the job. Downey liked the way I handled it and after that insisted that I be his conductor. That gave me my start."

In 1929, Mr. Warnow became first violinist with the Columbia Broadcasting System and eventually became staff conductor at CBS. Among the radio shows for which he formerly directed the music were "March of Time," "We, the People," and a dramatic feature starring Helen Hayes. In 1943 he backed a musical comedy on Broadway, "What's Up?" One of his proudest moments occurred in 1940, when he conducted the New York Philharmonic in "Ballad For Americans."

Mr. Warnow was the originator of a number of innovations in music, such as playing a popular song in the style of Bach. A short stocky, nervous man, he was considered a musical doctor. This doctoring was first noticed on a Morton Downey program. The music just didn't sound right at first. Mr. Warnow smoothed it out and soon had his own sustaining program, "Blue Velvet," where he was allowed to do as he pleased.

Among the things that pleased him were playing fugues in swing, or taking familiar themes like "Sing Something Simple" and rewriting them in the pure fugue style. The "Blue Velvet" program resulted in his being named director of "Your Hit Parade" in 1937, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Mr. Warnow married twice. His first wife, the former Sylvia Rapaport of Brooklyn, died in 1939. In 1942 he married Helen McGowan of New York and Scarsdale, N.Y., the union ending in divorce last August.

Surviving are three children of the first marriage, Morton, Mrs. Elaine Ansell, and Sandra Warnow; two children of the second marriage, Suzanne and Josette Warnow; also a brother, Raymond Scott, well-known orchestra leader and composer.

Jews Get Back Nazi Loot Of Books, Objects

The recovery of 250,000 volumes of Judaica and 10,000 ceremonial objects in Germany, representing part of the Nazi loot from Jewish libraries, synagogues and museums in Europe, and their shipment out of that country last year, was announced by Prof. Salo W. Baron of Columbia University, president of Jewish Cultural Reconstruction, Inc., at its annual meeting, in New York, at the Harmonie Club, 4 East Sixtieth Street.

Dr. Baron, who is Professor of Jewish History at Columbia, reported that many of the recovered volumes and religious objects showed spiteful destruction. Hundreds of burned or damaged Torah (holy) scrolls, some of them 200 or more years old, are now being repaired, he said, at the Paris office of the Joint Distribution Committee and placed in new or reconstructed synagogues in Europe and Israel.

Officers re-elected, in addition to Professor Baron as president, were: Prof. Jerome Michael of Columbia Law School, chairman of the board of directors; Rabbi Leo Baeck, of London; Prof. Gershon Scholem, of Jerusalem; and Dr. Simon Federbusch and Alan M. Strook, of New York, vice-presidents; and David Rosenstein and Dr. Max Gruenewald, of New York, respectively, treasurer and secretary.

Aide Is In N.Y. To Help Nazi Victims

Dr. Philipp Auerbach, chairman of an indemnification committee in Western Germany, arrived in New York to help expedite claims of damages for 10,000 to 12,000 former inmates of Nazi concentration camps who now live in the United States and Canada.

Dr. Auerbach, who also is the attorney general for indemnification in Bavaria, is meeting with representatives of the Joint Distribution Committee to explain procedures under which German states in the Western zones have undertaken to indemnify victims of the Nazis; and is giving some lectures.

Under a law passed last October, Dr. Auerbach said, former concentration camp inmates are to receive 1,800 Deutsch marks for each year spent in confinement. The indemnification laws, he said, provide pensions for widows and orphans, and payment for loss of property limited to 75,000 marks and for damage to professional careers limited to 25,000 marks. He noted that nothing similar had been done in the Soviet zone.

The Racham: Brodkof's Synagogue

By Henry Cohen

(Concluded from Last Week)

The Saturday afternoon club was quietly dropped. Instead, Sammy, Theodore, Elijah, Goldberg, and myself as well as five other totally unrelated boys named Cohen, went to the Racham on Sunday mornings and every weekday evening in order "to learn."

In the Yeshivah Talmudical College, I had been learning the chapter which begins: "Two men seize a prayer-shawl. This one says, I found it, and this one says, I found it . . ." As a matter of fact, I had not been doing too well at that chapter. I came late to classes, I day-dreamed, I made excuses for getting off early. My relatives said that it was probably because the rabbi at the Yeshivah Talmudical College had not made "Two men seize a prayer-shawl" interesting enough. It was the duty of a teacher to make the talmud interesting, to hold the attention even of a somewhat frivolously-minded boy like myself. Perhaps, also, "Two men seize a prayer-shawl" was not the right chapter for a boy of eleven. Therefore the switchover to Rabbi Sborodinovich might be just the change that was necessary, apart from saving me the daily journey to the East End.

With Rabbi Sborodinovich we learnt the chapter which begins, "An ox gores a cow, whether on the public highway or on private property — who is liable?" Here, said my relatives, is the chance to show what you can do, with a new chapter, an absorbing and exciting chapter, and a first-rate teacher who knows how to make the talmud interesting. I myself thought that I might do better on "An ox gores a cow." But it did not take me long to experience the same sense of defeat and gloom at the sight of "An ox gores a cow" as had afflicted me in the East End at the sight of "Two men seize a prayer-shawl". The fault, I began to feel —and subsequent years confirmed my childish intuition — did not lie with Rabbi Sborodinovich, nor with the rabbi at the Yeshivah Talmudical College, nor with "Two men seize a prayer-shawl," nor with "An ox gores a cow," nor even with myself. The cause was more fundamental and quite inescapable; I was allergic to the talmud. There existed between myself and the talmud an irreconcilable incompatability.

At the age of eleven, however, I could only sense these things. I could not express myself, except by coming late, day-dreaming, making excuses for going home early, and buying stinkbombs and explosive caps.

Rabbi Sborodinovich's class at the Racham very soon split up into the majority which did not buy stinkbombs and explosive caps, and the minority which did. The minority consisted of Elijah, one of the five distinct Cohens and myself. We did not really know what we were doing in buying these dreadful things. We were, after all, only children. It was so easy to walk into the sweet-shop, plank down a penny, and leave with a harmless-looking glass phial of a stinkbomb; or to plank down another penny and walk out with four harmless-looking, tiny, screwed-up balls of paper containing a few grains of explosive. If any blame is to be apportioned, the authorities who permitted the sale of these noxious baubles, and the shopkeeper who for mere gain sold them, they must receive the major share. We, for our part, did no more than throw them into corners of the Racham, a simple act, surely, in itself of little consequence.

Yet the effects of this simple act were terrible, for it released upon the Racham all the dark forces which the fiendish ingenuity of the manufacturers, with their research chemists, their powerful machines, and their up-to-date industrial organization, could concentrate into a tiny bauble sold for a penny over the shop counter. The stinkbombs were probably more vicious than the explosive caps; and in addition they were silent, their action was delayed, their effect was long and heartbreakingly difficult to counteract, and the culprit responsible for them was almost impossible to detect. Truly these stinkbombs were evil. Their smell was monstrously disgusting, they opened to the mind undreamt of and otherwise unimaginable hells. One alone, in the furthest corner of the room, was sufficient to render Rabbi Sborodinovich's position untenable. The room had to be evacuated and the lesson abandoned for at least half an hour.

Indeed, the stinkbombs were so abominable that the other Cohen and I took fright. We could not go through with the campaign. We became sick at heart when the first nauseating whiff drifted over from a broken phial. Though we all laughed in the passage outside — even Rabbi Sborodinovich smiled wanly at the first few stinkbombs— there was fear and disquiet in our laughter. Such foulness as that which had just been perpetrated in the Racham could not go unpunished; it was wicked, truly evil.

The other Cohen and I, as I have said, very soon backed out of the stinkbomb campaign. Rabbi Sborodinovich looked forlorn. Those bombs really had knocked the fight out of him. Only Elijah was inhumanly content.

"H2S, that's all it is," he said. "Maybe there are one or two refinements as well. I wonder who did it; sure it wasn't you, Theodore?"

Theodore grinned, because we all knew that he positively enjoyed the talmud, as he enjoyed every difficult mental activity, thus coming top in every subject in every class he had ever been in at school.

"Are you sure it wasn't you?" replied Theodore.

Rabbi Sborodinovich looked at Elijah with the ultimate hatred of a mild man provoked beyond endurance. He waited, however, to catch Elijah in the act, because otherwise Mr. Stannenberg would have been offended. "My Elijah!" he would have said. "A playful youngster, I know; but commit an outrage like that! Never! . . ."

But the situation resolved itself. Suddenly Elijah had had enough, not merely of the stinkbombs, but of the talmud, the Racham, and everything connected with Jewish tradition, learning and religion. He refused to come even as far as the passage for Friday and Saturday services, and of course he stayed away from evening classes.

After the departure of Elijah and the stinkbombs, there still remained the explosive caps. They were, so to speak, clean weapons. There was no smoke; they exploded with a sharp, loud bang, and made us all jump simultaneously in our chairs, and that was that. It was easy to throw them with a quick, imperceptible flick of the wrist. The explosion came from the far-away corner where they struck the wall or the floor. Who was responsible now that Elijah had left? Rabbi Sborodinovich made some ballistic calculations whereby suspicion fell on the other Cohen and myself.

One day he actually saw me throwing the infuriating cap. He lost his temper. "Wild beast!" he shouted at me. "Hound! All black years you bring upon me!" He came at me with fist upraised. I dodged round the first row of seats on which the congregation sat at weekends. He followed. I dived into the fourth row. He turned back to block my exit. I climbed over two rows of seats into the sixth row, crashed along it, and bolted into the passage and out into the street.

I was sent back to the Yeshivah Talmudical College, where they were used to handling the toughest boys in the East End and the rabbis knew how to lay about them. There I reverted to my more usual role of meek and mild recalcitrant, a day-dreamer, a latecomer, a maker of excuses for getting off early.

With all the excitement over, the other students at the Racham very soon began to drop off. They found it frankly dull, sitting there evening after evening, just the handful of them, with no distractions, however disgusting or violent, to relieve the long middle stretches of the dialectic on "An ox gores a cow." They wanted to get back to the Yeshivah Talmudical College, where at any rate there were over a hundred boys, games during break, occasional fights, simmering revolt, the interest of travelling by eleven different routes from Hackney, and the vivid, noisy, crowded, smelly background of the East End. Eventually only Theodore was left. Then Rabbi Sborodinovich found a job in the provinces and the Racham was empty from one week-end to the next.

In due course, everybody grew older. Some died; Firmann died, Stannenberg died. "The boys", for better or for worse, went their own headstrong way. The congregation grew smaller, very small indeed. They no longer troubled to have electric light on Friday evenings at the Racham. The surviving elders sat by the flickering light of candles and muttered their old plaints. "Insanity, a madness has come upon the world . . ." Brodkof left the district, it was growing very slummy; very different from what it had been in the old days, when the carriages used to roll along Amherst Road. Somehow the Racham was kept open until the war came and a bomb blew off the roof. The shattered house was pulled down. Now nothing stands there at all, only a stretch of flat, levelled ground marked out for future development.

Boy Finds Home By Act Of U.S. Congress

Jacob Gross looked out of the window of his new home and saw America. It was a big place bordered on the corner opposite his grandfather's home at 934 Hopkinson Avenue in Brooklyn, N.Y., a row of brown tenements and a blue sky. And it bustled with things that seemed odd to the pale child orphaned soon after he was born two years ago in Rumania.

No trace was left of the tears that filled his blue eyes when photographers swarmed around him earlier on the Gdynia America liner Sobieski. And he was too busy learning about his new life to hear his grandfather thank in prayer President Truman and Congress for having passed a special act to admit the child to the U.S.

The act called Jacob the "son" of Rabbi Solomon Horowitz to bring him within quota limitations. But he is the son of the rabbi's daughter and her husband, who were killed when their plane plowed into a mountain in Czechoslovakia. Jacob was the sole survivor of the crash.

The Joint Distribution Committee of the United Jewish Appeal returned the baby to his grandparents in Bucharest and then helped start them, their five other children and Jacob on the way to the United States. But Rabbi Horowitz was told in Paris that his grandson was not included in the rabbinical visa that covered his wife and children.

After efforts to get a visa for the baby failed in Europe and his own visa neared the expiration date, Rabbi Horowitz and his children set sail last December for their chosen land. His wife, Malca, remained in Paris to care for Jacob while the bearded rabbi pleaded the baby's case in New York and Washington. Representative Isidore Dollinger, a Democrat from the Bronx, helped the story reach a happy ending.

"Is this our home?" Jacob asked his grandmother after they walked up a flight of stairs to the three-room flat in Brownsville. Her happy answer thrilled him so much that he hardly touched the food on the dining room table. And as the rest of the family dined on noodle soup, chicken, wine and oranges for their first meal together in almost a year, Jacob [illegible] the window in the next room.

"What's that?" he asked again and again in Yiddish and pointed to different objects outside.

"That's a bicycle and that's a taxi," she answered first in the only language he knew and then in English. The child's other questions were answered by his older aunts, Beilah, 16, Hannah, 16, and his Uncle Joseph, 13. They are students at Hebrew parochial schools, where they have learned to speak almost accent-free English in the ten months they have been in New York, says the New York Times.

Editor Fought Convict Leasing

Abraham Hurwitz, whose forty-year newspaper career made him widely known as a liberal crusading editor, died of a heart attack in Miami, Florida. Mr. Hurwitz, who was 61 years old, had been at his desk as editorial writer for The Miami Herald the day before.

In 1922-23 his editorials condemning convict leasing and flogging cases in Florida were widely reprinted. He also helped draft the Washington State Workmen's Compensation Act, the first such legislation in the nation to be held Constitutional.

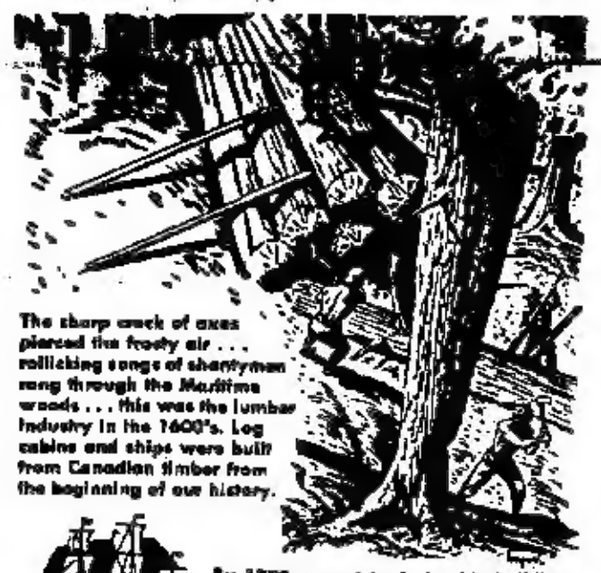
Born in Brooklyn, he went to the Pacific Northwest as a boy, with his parents. After studying at the University of Washington, he was admitted to the bar, but never practiced. Instead, he turned to the newspaper field, and was a reporter successively for The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, The Seattle Times, Hoquiam Washingtonian and The Seattle Star.

Mr. Hurwitz was editor of The Seattle Star from 1918 to 1922. It was there he met John R. Perry, attorney for the Star. Mr. Perry acquired The Jacksonville Journal in the early Nineteen Twenties and brought Mr. Hurwitz to Florida as its editor in 1922-24. Mr. Hurwitz next held the post as editor of The Reading (Pa.) Times until Mr. Perry sold it in the late Nineteen Thirties. Mr. Hurwitz then was made editor of the Western Newspaper Union, a syndicate for weekly newspapers.

Mr. Hurwitz left Mr. Perry's employ in 1942 to spend a year as editor of The Seattle Star before returning to Florida as editor of all the Perry newspapers in the state. He served on the now defunct Philadelphia Record briefly in 1946 before coming to The Miami Herald in November, 1946.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Charlotte Lippert Hurwitz, of Miami; and an adopted son, Edward Cleghorn, who lived in Allentown, Pa.

TURNING THE PAGES OF "CANADA UNLIMITED"



The sharp crack of axes pierced the frosty air . . . rollicking songs of shantymen rang through the Maritime woods . . . this was the lumber industry in the 1600's. Log cabins and ships were built from Canadian timber from the beginning of our history.

By 1700, export trade in ship-building materials was carried on with the West Indies. After 1760, sailing vessels braved the stormy Atlantic to carry New Brunswick timber to England for the ships of the British Navy. Canada took the lead in forest industry.

Lumbering opened up vast new areas along the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa valley. In 1803, Canada's first pulp mill was erected at Argenteuil, Quebec. There followed a rapidly expanding demand for pulpwood and newsprint. By 1900, Canada was supplying a major portion of the world's needs.

Today Canadian production of newsprint is greater than the combined output of the next five leading countries. 4,800,000 tons were produced in 1947. Research has led to the development of other wood products, such as cellulose, rayon and plastics. This rapid growth points to a wide future for Canadians. Yes, there's room to grow—in Canada Unlimited.

MARRIAGES

AISENHAND-SILVERSTONE

The marriage of Miss Rebecca Silverstone, daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Myer Silverstone, to Abraham Aisenhand, took place on Sunday, September 11, at twelve o'clock noon, at Rev. M. Master's, who officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Silverstone. She wore a white satin gown, fashioned with a form-fitting bodice, which had a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, and the princess line of the dress ended in a bouffant skirt. Her coronet headdress, which was of seed-pearl beads, was arranged over a veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a Bible over which were white orchids. Miss Phyllis Charness, niece of the bride, was maid of honour, wearing a turquoise-blue taffeta gown, designed on princess lines and having a square neckline. Her headdress was of pink tulle and Sweetheart roses, with matching gloves, and she carried a nosegay bouquet of roses and bouvardia. Simon Schnaer, cousin of the groom, was best man. A reception and dinner followed the ceremony, pink and white carnations, asters and gladioli decorating the hall. Receiving, Mrs. Silverstone wore a wine-shaded changeable taffeta dress, having a plunging neckline, cloche hat of black velvet, trimmed with wine feathers, and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Kaplansky, cousin of the groom, wore a floor-length gown of blue crepe, trimmed with silver beading, a hat to match, and a corsage of red roses. Wedding guests were Mr. and Mrs. Saul Senders, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Senders, and Mr. and Mrs. B. Kaplansky, of New York. Mr. and Mrs. Aisenhand are residing in Montreal.

CLARE-SIMON

The marriage of Miss Cynthia J. Simon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Simon, of Halifax, N.S., to Lionel J. Clare, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clare, 4374 Melrose Avenue, took place in Shaare Zion Synagogue, on Tuesday, September 27, at six o'clock. Rabbi Maurice Cohen officiated, assisted by Cantor G. Berkovits and Cantor S. Miller. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin and lace gown, fashioned with a draped bodice, having a Colonial neckline and finger-tip-length sleeves, with the skirt shaping into a short train. Her headdress was of lace and satin and she carried white orchids. Mrs. J. Goldenberg, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a grey lace and faille gown, a grey satin feathered halo-effect headdress, and a cascade bouquet of mauve-toned gladioli. The bridesmaids were Mrs. L. Kaplan and Miss Faye Simon, the former wearing a chartreuse-green satin gown; and the latter, a powder-blue satin gown. They had matching feathered headdresses, and old-fashioned bouquets of pompoms, yellow and bronze-coloured. Rhona Salit, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl, wearing a pink satin floor-length dress, trimmed with ruffles, and pink satin bonnet, trimmed with a blue ostrich feather. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of blue carnations, outlined with pink feathers. Benjamin Salit was best man, and the ushers were Lionel Mauer and Albert Schrier. A picture frame of flowers formed the entrance to the altar, and a choir sang during the ceremony. The reception and dinner took place at the Ritz Carlton Hotel. The bride's mother wore a wine-grape-coloured gown of lace and tissue faille, with matching hat, and corsage of orchids. The groom's mother wore a grey lace gown, hat to match, and corsage of orchids. The bride and groom left on a motor trip to New York and Atlantic City, N.J., and will reside in Timmins, Ont. Do You Know... where the name "hockey" came from?

The word 'hockey' is derived from the 'hooked stick' with which the game is played, from the Old French word 'hoquet', meaning 'shepherd's crook'.

Do You Know . . . that the general idea of ice hockey is not original with Canada? Many 16th and 17th century Dutch paintings show a game something like hockey being played with a stick shaped like a golf club.

Do You Know . . . that there are sharp differences of opinion as to exactly when and where the first ice hockey games were played in Canada? Although Kingston, Halifax and Montreal are most often mentioned in this connection, available records seem to suggest that the first organized games were played around 1881, between the Victoria Hockey Club and McGill University teams, in Montreal, and in Kingston between the Royal Military College and Queens University.

Do You Know any interesting and unusual facts? Our "Advisory Panel" will pay $25 for any authenticated readers' submissions if they are usable. All letters become our property. Write Black Horse Brewery, Station L, Montreal, P.Q.

J.D.C. MOVES 6,000 FROM LIBYA TO HAIFA

Disclosure of a completed emergency evacuation to Israel of practically all the Jews of Cyrenaica was made by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, chairman of the European Executive Council of the Joint Distribution Committee, at the agency's Country Directors Conference in Paris. Reporting the exodus, he stated that 6,000 Jewish men, women and children had been moved from this North African province of Libya to Haifa, and added that since the establishment of Israel a total of 34,000 Jews from North Africa had been helped to emigrate to Israel by JDC.

The week-long conference at the Hotel Palais D'Orsay was attended by American leaders and directors of operations in some 24 countries of Europe, North Africa, and the Near East to give eye-witness evidence of Jewish recovery, to discuss current problems and chart future needs. Important immigration developments were revealed.

Following the emigration of 1,500 Jews from Yugoslavia, JDC's offices will close soon after January 1. Emigration from Poland to Israel is expected to resume next month.

The JDC, which by the end of this year will have brought nearly 200,000 Jews to Israel, must plan to bring at least 100,000 to the Holy Land in 1950.

Dr. Schwartz pointed out that the revival of Jews overseas has outstripped the most optimistic hopes, but that JDC's work is far from finished. In 1950, he said, JDC, in addition to its vast emigration responsibilities, must aid at least 100,000 Jews to achieve self-support and must provide basic welfare service to rehabilitate the sick and the handicapped.

C.I.O. GROUP RECOMMENDS AID TO ISRAEL

A delegation of the Congress of Industrial Organizations that visited Pa[illegible] recently recommended furth[illegible] substantial loans by the United [illegible]s to the Republic of Israel. A [illegible]ess luncheon in Washington, D.[illegible] delegation's reports was made public in the presence of Eliahu Elath, Ambassador from Israel, and United States Government officials.

The delegation, appointed by CIO President Philip Murray, consisted of Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, and Maxwell Brandwen, counsel to the Amalgamated.

The delegation's report referred to Israel as "As bastion of democracy in the Middle East." It suggested that the Tel-Aviv Government still required extensive financial help in the form of gifts, loans and private investments so that it might establish the "wide scale industrial expansion" Israel required to grow and survive.

The report was addressed to Mr. Murray who, in an introductory note, said that the CIO "has always looked with favor and sympathy on the efforts of men and women everywhere to win freedom and achieve economic progress".

The delegation asked the CIO to seek encouragement of big-scale private investment in Israeli economic projects. It proposed that a CIO Israel-American Committee be formed "to provide a channel through which future fraternal relations between the CIO and the Histadruth (the General Federation of Labor in Israel) may best be handled."

The delegation also urged encouragement of contributions to organizations in the United States that are raising funds to help the people of Israel.

CHOCOLATE ICE-BOX SQUARES

one-half pound butter
four squares melted bitter chocolate four egg-yolks
two cups icing sugar four egg-whites
one box graham crackers

For the filling, cream together butter and sugar until light and fluffy; add egg yolks, and beat. Add melted chocolate, stirring in well, and then fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Moisten graham crackers slightly by passing them under running water, but crackers must not be too damp. Put down lightly a portion of the crackers on the bottom of a glass baking-dish. Spread filling over that; and then repeat with layers of slightly-moistened crackers, and layers of filling, until filling and crackers have been used up, and the top layer is filling. If desired, green and red maraschino cherries may be cut up and placed on top of each filling layer to add color. Cover and store for twenty-four hours in refrigerator. Cut in squares. This is an easy dessert to prepare, but care must be taken that crackers are not too wet.

The best that Canada grows is prepared especially for Canadian Babies by Aylmer

AYLMER BABY FOODS

YOUR BABY DESERVES AYLMER QUALITY

Psychologists haven't quite persuaded orthodontists that it is proper to let a child suck its thumb, says Dr. A. R. Winn, of McGill University's Department of Orthodontics, in an article, "Orthodontics and Civilization", in the current issue of Health, Canada's National Health Magazine. "They say that stopping the habit will do something to the child's personality, etc., etc., and that the teeth can easily be straightened later," comments Dr. Winn in his contribution to Health which is published by the Health League of Canada. "I wonder if having to live for a number of years behind the deformed face of a habitual thumb-sucker doesn't do something to the personality too? Also the thought can't help cropping up that the psychologist doesn't have to do the job of trying to correct displaced teeth, which is often anything but easy; furthermore, he doesn't have to pay for it. Anyway this contains another suggestion for prevention of a certain type of malocclusion of the teeth. If thumb-sucking indicates a craving for more affection on the part of the child, give it more affection, and at the same time stop the habit; not by constant nagging, which won't work, but by constant encouragement."

While cancer is primarily a disease of older people, it attacks both young and old at times. More than 14,000 Canadians die from cancer each year, but it is estimated that as many as 5,000 lives might be saved by early detection and treatment. If you have reason to suspect cancer, see a qualified physician at once. Time is important.

province of Canada. We formerly talked of the interest and contribution of citizens from Cape Breton to Victoria. Our vocabulary has now changed so that we will, in future, say from St. John's to Victoria. We welcome Newfoundland Jewry and are sure that they will be quick to find their niche in the Canadian unity in the same way as the tenth province.

We are called upon in Congress to do many things, a great number of which do not appear in any report of ours nor in the work of our particular committees. The advice of Congress is sought by dozens of organizations across the country and we are truly in a position of being the conscience of the country. Your Executive Committee has discharged this obligation with rare diplomacy, tact and ability.

May I say that in this team, all have played their parts but you will understand if I signalize our regional and sectional chairmen—Mr. Sol Kanee of Winnipeg, for Western Canada; Mr. Ben Sadowski, M.B.E., for the province of Ontario; Mr. Monroe Abbey for the Eastern Region; plus Mr. Michael Garber, K.C., Vice-Chairman of the National Executive Committee; Mr. Esmond Lando of British Columbia; Mr. William Kaplansky of the Maritime Section; and Mr. Joseph H. Fine, K.C., our National Treasurer. Their very positions call upon them to represent their own colleagues and their own Executive Committees and other committees and sub-committees. I, as National President speaking for all of you, am sincerely impressed, as always, with their contribution.

Their predecessors in the years before that have truly earned the gratitude of all of us and their records shed lustre on their names. This is not to ignore the fine record of many others as well, the officers and workers in many other organizations working closely with us, cooperating with us and joining with us in producing contributions in a variety of fields of endeavour.

I am happy also to pay tribute to the many cooperative agencies with whom we have worked for the common good. I refer particularly to the B'nai B'rith, National Council of YMHAs and YWHAs, Jewish Immigrant Aid Society, the Canadian Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, to mention only the organizations with which we are in daily and close association. There are, of course, dozens of others and to omit their names is not to omit the recognition of the part they play in the totality of efforts.

On the world scene, the cooperation of the Joint Distribution Committee and of the World Jewish Congress has been of inestimable value. I wish also to express my appreciation and the appreciation of our officers of the talents and tireless service of our Executive Director, Mr. Saul Hayes, of our General Secretary, Mr. H. M. Caiserman, of the Regional and Departmental Directors and of the members of their staffs.

October 24th is an anniversary date of some significance to all Canadians. This is the day set aside throughout the civilized world to commemorate United Nations and is called "United Nations Day." There can be no question that the only hope for Canada and its citizenry is if the United Nations day by day, week by week, month by month and year by year, gets stronger and stronger so that in truth it becomes the ethical voice of mankind with increasing respect for it and authority vested in it. This cannot be done if the leaders of small nations play hob with the principles of the United Nations.

Canada has earned by sheer merit a most enviable position at the top rung of nations, big or small. She has been able to maintain this position of leadership because of her desire to see a stable world and an orderly relationship between nations. Every Canadian citizen, therefore, must continue to support this bi-partisan policy of parliament. The United Nations is the cornerstone of Canadian foreign policy. The extent to which the United Nations is weakened, Canadian foreign policy is in a perilous position. The extent to which the United Nations is strengthened, strengthens Canada's public position and the security of its inhabitants.

Delegates to the Eighth Plenary Session! They are high and serious undertakings which I have indicated as belonging to the immediate future. Granted the continuance of a peace that the world has so richly deserved I have no doubt of their fulfilment. Canadian Jewry which has acquitted itself with distinction and honour through the years of Crisis has it in itself, I know, also to assume and successfully perform the essential tasks of the years of untrumpeted constructiveness.

We look forward indeed to an era, not yet with us but surely in the coming, when our energies will be devoted not to the mending of things destroyed but to the active creation of positive values — an era in which our Canadian cultural institutions will move from strength to strength and in which our contribution to the further growth of Canada will be greater than ever before.

Already our country has won new importance and added stature in the Councils of the world; we who are part of that destiny are to its noble objectives unalterably committed. In the building of things material and in the fashioning of things spiritual, Canada is making rapid strides towards the future; Canadian Jewry is of that forward march.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

What Is The Origin Of Life On Earth?

What is the origin of the earth and life on earth? With this question man has grappled ever since he began to think. The first chapter of Genesis is the Jewish story of how life might have originated. Most ancient peoples have had their own traditions about the beginning of things. The Babylonians, the Romans, the Phoenicians and the Greeks developed their own stories of creation. For them usually the gods emerged from pre-existent chaos.

But the Jewish story differs from all other accounts in that it tells of One God as the creator of the world, not by chance but by will. The Jewish story is a poetic description of creation and rather emphasizes how man first began to think as to the origin of life on earth. The author was indeed a great genius and this story of creation contains some of the most fundamental beliefs of Judaism.

The story of creation is not in conflict with evolution. Nor need we try to harmonize this story of a six-day process and declare these six days to be ages and thus say that it is not in conflict with science. The Bible, to begin with, is not a text book on science. It is a book of ethical teachings containing stories, parables, poetry, history, and legend. Primarily it is the spiritual biography of the Jewish people in its search for God.

The Bible, being a human collection of books which took about a thousand years in its development, is therefore not infallible. Divine truth which it contains is always the same, the form in which it is represented differs because the medium is human. The Bible suffered very often at the hands of its friends because they made of it a text book of science, a fetish and what not!

Because of misinterpretations the Bible has often been misused. Thus when Christopher Columbus sought to discover a Western passage to the Indies, was he not bitterly opposed by the theologians? They took that beautiful poetic 19th Psalm and made gobgraphy out of it. Harvey, in 1628, proclaims his epoch-making discovery of the circulation of the blood. For this, churchimnity attacked him. Thus the human mind, thinking about anatomy, misused the Bible as its final appeal. In 1798 Jenner made the remarkable discovery of vaccination as a defense against small-pox. Immediately the Bible was improperly used to attack the scientific advance. Was not man made in the image of God? We dare not scratch or disfigure the human body! Theologians, too, objected to the use of anaesthetics with women in child-birth because of the curse, "In pain shalt thou bring forth children."

Well do we recall that Servitus was burned at the stake in Geneva in 1553 by the Protestant Calvin, because Servitus was found guilty of heresy, and one of the charges against him was that he believed the statement of a Greek geographer that Judea was a barren country. And do not the Scriptures tell us that Judea was a "land flowing with milk and honey?" The fundamentalists of the synagogue may be reminded also, that they excommunicated a Spinoza because he dared to be liberal and interpret scripture in his own light.

There is nothing un-Jewish in the evolutionary concept which teaches that man arose from a simple origin. How remarkable all the more is the concept of the One God as the creator who has placed the potentialities in a jellyfish so that in the process of time out of that jellyfish the world was blessed with a Moses, an Isaiah, a Shakespeare, and an Einstein. In fact, evolution confirms the story of Genesis.

What better story have we as to the origin of life than that set forth in Holy Scriptures? The scientists stand baffled at the mystery of life and the mystery of death. With all our boast of knowledge, man cannot even create a blade of grass, a simple flower. Indeed, the greatest of scientists of today posit an intelligence at work in the universe.

The second great doctrine which the first chapter of Genesis proclaims is that man constitutes the crown of creation. As the Psalmist speaks, "Thou has made him a little lower than the angels and crowned him with glory and honor." Man, as the Midrash points out, is both a child of heaven and a child of dust. He differs from all other creatures in that he is endowed with a mind and a soul. Hence man is to "subdue the earth," by the power of his soul. Alas, too often, because man forgot his soul, the earth has been converted into a jungle and inhumanity has reigned supreme. The world at present is in danger of being converted into chaos and void unless man rediscovers his soul and his God-given qualities.

Still another great doctrine which the first chapter of Genesis proclaims is that of the goodness of the world. Our world is indeed a goodly habitation. Even the sorrows and the disappointments constitute helpful factors in the pattern of life. Because man has to struggle with evil and overcome evil therein lies the opportunity for the building of character. Even death is good, say the rabbis, and is to be looked upon as part of the life process formulated in the poetic story of creation.

Last but not least, the great Jewish doctrine of the Sabbath, "the queen of days", is formulated in the Genesis story. Man, through a Sabbath, thus consecrates work and is ever to regard work as one of the choicest blessings in life. Only he who is a slave to his work knows not the delight of a Sabbath for he has not the discipline of Sabbath observance and reduces his whole life to a mechanical state and an animal existence when neither in home, church, or synagogue he observes a day of rest and a day for spiritual uplift.

"In the beginning God created," this, indeed, according to the French scientist, Cuvier, is the greatest sentence which has ever been written. The world and civilization can only have meaning when we recognize the glory of the everlasting Lord, the God of Eternity, the Creator of the Universe.

PRESIDENTIAL ADDRESS DELIVERED BEFORE THE CANADIAN JEWISH CONGRESS

By Samuel Bronfman, Of Montreal

On September the first of this year, — but seven weeks ago — the world had occasion to note, with feelings both of tragic recollection and grateful relief, that ten years had passed since was declared that war which had made lurid the life of this generation. The period 1939 — 1949 will go down in history, I have no doubt, as one of the most decisive decades in the annals of mankind.

One has but to think of what might have been had the fortunes of war gone otherwise than they went to come to the realization that in these ten strenuous years not only millions of humans but thirty centuries of civilization were plucked from the burning. Decisive as this decade has been to mankind at large, it has been even more so in the history of our people.

These have been the years which saw the slaughter of one-third of our total world-population; which stood menaced with the threat of complete destruction; and which brought, as the tide of events turned, not only salvation and rescue of the Remnant, but also, as if by some miraculous intervention, the fulfilment of age-old dreams and hopes. No other decade in our history, I think, is so terrible with threatenings and so vibrant with triumph as these, the ten dramatic years which mark both the end and the beginning of contrasting chapters in our people's story.

You will forgive me, therefore, if in the retrospect which I now intend, I not only cast a backward glance upon the two year period which has elapsed since last we met, but take also into my view the flame-lit and smoke-filled perspective which stretches back to 1939. This period coincides with the period during which it was my privilege and responsibility to preside over the affairs of Congress. I am proud from this vantage-point to declare that in the momentous events the recollection of which I am about to evoke, Canadian Jewry — though geographically located, as some then thought but think no longer, on the sidelines—played the role not of a mere spectator, but of an active, a valiant, an energetic participant.

Our minds run back to those days in the fall of 1939 when, the tocsin having sounded, the Canadian Jewish Congress, which wise and good men had earlier established, transformed itself from the forum of discussion it had largely been into a day-to-day functioning instrument. The first result was that there developed in Canadian Jewish life a sense of communal unity not hitherto experienced and henceforth never to be impaired.

Thus fortified the Canadian Jewish Congress was able to make, through its efforts in recruiting, finance and auxiliary services an impressive contribution to the war effort. And Canadian Jewry, emerging from the struggle with a record and a roll of honour second to none, knew its duty splendidly accomplished, knew its bond with country and cause again sealed with the red seal of sacrifice.

After the war—the wreckage; here, too, the Canadian Jewish Congress, launching through its associate agencies campaign after campaign to bring aid and sustenance to the tens of thousands of victims of Nazism, played its proper role. Statistics there are to indicate the full extent of these activities in war and in peace, but no statistical record ever compiled can possibly reveal the full scope and implication of the grandiose themes in which our country and our people stood engaged.

Consider it: in this one decade we participated unto victory in the most terrible war which ever threatened mankind. We saw the crematoria rise, and saw them razed to the ground. We rescued—alas, after so great loss—the remainder of our brothers in Europe. We sustained them, destitute and homeless. We continue to sustain them, until their brighter day too shall shine. We participated in the effecting of great migrations of people. We made possible for them, not without the generous help of our Government, a great sanctuary. We stopped the dark history of Hitler; we helped to turn history towards brighter tomorrows.

The Canadian Jewish Congress also made, within the limits of its essential Canadianism, its contribution to international discussion and decision. We were present at the founding sessions of the United Nations at San Francisco, concerned there with the declarations touching human rights and the stipulations for minority protection; our Mr. Hayes participated in the Paris Conference on peace treaties; we maintained friendly and cooperative ties with organizations devoted to Jewish affairs on the world scene; but above all, we saw that there was given utterance, again and again, to the positive sentiments of Canadian Jewry with regard to the establishment of the State of Israel.

That consummation, all Jewry rejoices, has come to pass. The dream of twenty centuries now stands before the world -- a deed accomplished. For the ghettos of Europe and the mellahs of Islam, homelessness is about to see its termination, and for a million of our brothers — and more to come — Jewish history now moves in its own path and according to its own tradition. Reference to Congress statements throughout the years will amply demonstrate that despite the vicissitudes and vacillations of international policy we never lost faith in this, the eventual outcome. That faith, indeed, was founded upon our trust in the conscience of mankind, our belief that most people most of the time do the best that they can, and our conviction that the stateless and the homeless could not settle for less than a home and a state.

I am proud as a Canadian to declare that in the constitutional accomplishment of this end our own statesmen, Prime Minister Mr. Louis St. Laurent, the Honourable Mr. Lester B. Pearson, the Honourable J. L. Ilsley, Mr. Justice Rand and the great mentor of Canadian statesmanship, the former Prime Minister Mr. Mackenzie King, played most distinguished and effective roles. All Jewry is grateful to them for the voices they raised on behalf of a just and peaceful settlement. I wish also to signalize here the profound appreciation which the United States of America took towards this grand solution.

Nor do we, at these expressions of gratitude, forget the first of our friends; I am convinced that in the decades to come when the history of the continuing Jewish State shall be written, it will be therein indicated that, though the birth of the State took place on May fourteenth, 1948, the seed for its conception was sown on November second, 1917, when that great British statesman, Lord Balfour, first spoke in the name of the British people.

It is true that for a while there appeared to be in British foreign policy a deviation from the Balfour tradition. For our part, we never had any doubt but that deviation was temporary; it is now, therefore, with a sense of friendly satisfaction that we note that the British representatives at Lausanne, recently discussing the future of Palestine, took up a position of wholehearted support of a viable State of Israel.

British foreign policy thus has resumed its traditional attitude, and the long cordial history of Anglo-Jewish relations, shadowed for a space, now promises to glow again with the faith which presided over King James' translation of the Bible, the fellow-feeling which moved British legislation toward the extension of democratic rights, and the hope which impelled the Government of His Majesty, King George the Fifth, to issue its famous letter.

Thus Canadian Jewry was able, through its support of this movement of sanctuary, to help rescue its European brothers towards the east. It rescued them also towards the west. Beginning with its facilitation of the settlement in Canada of Jewish refugee farmers as early as 1939; moving on toward its efforts to empty the local refugee camps and to bring their innocent detainees — students, technicians, able-bodied men — into the Canadian army, Canadian schools, and the Canadian economy; bringing to these shores refugee rabbis and other men of culture; making arrangements for the admission of 1000 Jewish orphans from unoccupied France, an enterprise unfortunately then frustrated; attending before Government with briefs touching the immigration laws — in all of these undertakings, the Canadian Jewish Congress laboured with zeal and energy.

The immediate retrospect of the past two years is even more gratifying with rescue and achievement. Following upon a statement of immigration policy enunciated by the Prime Minister Mr. Mackenzie King, The Canadian Jewish Congress implemented an Order-in-Council for the admission of 1000 Jewish war orphans, an admission later extended to another 210. As a result of the liberalization of immigration rules covering the admission of relatives, thousands of Canadian citizens and their next of kin have been happily reunited on our shores.

The special schemes sponsored by our Government for the entry of tailors, furriers, milliners, lumber workers, domestics, nurses, and rabbinical students helped further to swell the quota of new Jewish Canadians. It is, indeed, estimated that 1948 saw the largest Jewish immigration into Canada in perhaps 35 years. We are grateful to, and proud of, our Canadian Government.

These activities — in war and in peace, upon fields national and international — stand vividly to the credit of the Canadian Jewish Congress. If I were asked: How was it possible that Canadian Jewry, comparatively so few in numbers and those numbers not compact but extended across the length and breadth of this Dominion — how was this Jewry able to encompass these no mean achievements? I would answer: Because we are citizens of no mean country.

The success which we have recorded would have been impossible if Canada were not a free and prosperous democracy. Our prestige before the Jewries of the world would not have been what it is were it not for the prestige which our country enjoys among the nations of the world. The Israeli solution might have gone otherwise were it not for the large-hearted and broad-minded stand adopted by Canadian statesmen and by Canadian leaders; indeed the U.N. recommendation with reference to Palestine might not have been what it was did not Canada enjoy its extraordinary prestige in that Assembly. The immigration figures which we have cited might not have been there, were it not that Canadian authority and Canadian officialdom, considering at once the needs of our country and the dictates of humanitarianism, came to the problem with vision and generosity.

Congress, celebrating this year its thirtieth anniversary, has certainly, in deeds as well as in years, come of age; but it has done so largely because Canada has entered its prime and maturity. It is good to be part of this great Canadian scene, and as Jews in the Canadian Community we owe as much to the task of building a strong Canada. And for those of us who believe in cultural pluralism and national unity, the more we do to strengthen Canadian Jewry, the more we do to strengthen Canadianism; the greater our achievements as Canadian Jews in all our efforts, religious, cultural and humanitarian, the more have we fulfilled our duty as Canadians.

I would, however, be doing Canadian Jewry a grave injustice if, through this record of achievement and victory and success, I gave you the impression that that Jewry now considers its labours done and is prepared to rest upon its laurels. No such illusion is cherished. Much, much, very much still remains to be undertaken. There is, first of all, the consolidation and final wind-up of our overseas work, work which entails not only the clearing of the DP camps which still remain in Europe — no little task — but also the sustenance and the keeping of those thousands who have been moved from Europe to Israel but have not yet been assimilated into an economy which in one year saw its total population increased by twenty-five per cent.

Among those Israeli newcomers are many who constitute long-term cases of social welfare, men broken in the ordeal who, though transplanted to a friendlier milieu, are still far from healing. It is unfair —and indeed, impossible—that that population which while in camps at Belsen was the concern of all world Jewry should become in camps near Haifa, the sole concern of a state still struggling towards viability.

Until in their own country they can stand on their own feet, it is upon us to uphold and support them. Certainly we must not allow ourselves, towards the end of our long endeavour, to jeopardize what has already been accomplished, — to lose through present weariness what through past energy we have gained.

Intimately connected with these works of rehabilitation is the fate of the Jewries under Moslem rule. They number about one million souls. They live under conditions of the abjectest poverty and severest discrimination. They constitute, in the hands of their Moslem governors, hostages continually in peril. And too long have they been the forgotten tribes of Jewry. From Yemen, from Iraq, from Africa, they long towards the frontiers of Israel, a state whose existence has come to them with the impact of a messianic revelation.

For their sake, and for the sake of those whom we have already helped toward Israel, we must come to their aid. Ladies and gentlemen, we might have been seventeen million Jews upon the face of the earth. We are only eleven million. Such diminutions must not be permitted to occur again! We must strive, therefore, for long-term solutions, not palliatives and alleviations. Moreover, of those eleven million, only five — the Jews of this continent — can be said to be leading unpressured lives. The privilege brings with it its duty! The duty, humbly but with determination, we assume.

There stand before us also, now come to the foreground in the unhectic years, the imperatives of our own local Canadian Jewish life. Here impressive beginnings have been made. The work which the Canadian Jewish Congress has done in the field of education, through the establishment of teachers' seminaries, through the publication of distinguished literary work, and through the conduct of research projects of important aspects of our community, singles it out as unique amidst organization of its kind. Our public relations program, too — whether intervening in the isolated instances of racial discrimination or active upon the wider canvass of public opinion — is one which has justly deserved the acclaim it has evoked.

Still, upon the agenda there loom many objectives of the first importance. Much remains to be done to assure the Canadian Jewish community of an adequate supply of teachers, of a discipline of Jewish education in harmony with both modern needs and ancient tradition, and of the creation in every community of a Jewish ambient which will strengthen our youth in their love and respect for our heritage. Above all there is the challenge of creating a community of a typically Canadian Jewish impress.

This is our country, and here, with the resources of our Judaic tradition, and through the channel of our country's progress, we mean to make our contribution to civilization. Jewish life cannot always be run at a fever; after the crises and the emergencies, there are the day-to-day normalities of communal organization, communal culture, and communal life. We shall not ever sever ourselves from the plight of our brethren abroad; the aspirations of our brothers at home, however — our Canadian-Jewish destiny — must now engage our efforts more than ever before.

It is under this orientation that our program of instruction for newcomers to our land is envisaged, and under this orientation that our general educational policies are to be formulated. The advent of the State of Israel, I think, lends support to this view — that State launched upon its sovereign autonomous path, we can now the[illegible] in our own way and in our [illegible] communities develop the course of Jewish tradition. For from the existence of the State of Israel we derive a pride and satisfaction which must inevitably facilitate the accomplishment here of our own cultural designs with satisfaction and pride.

There are indeed many consequences which flow from the fact of the establishment of the State of Israel. The first of these is that we — like the members of our Government — though not of it, are for it. We must aid in the safeguarding of its political gains, we must see to its economic consolidation. The second consequence, it appears to me, is the necessity for a change in many of the concepts and much of the vocabulary current in our life before it was realized.

May the fourteenth 1948 marked the end of an era; it brought also to an end the usefulness of slogans and attitudes which hitherto have had their raison d'etre. Until that date we had been face to face with a spiritual aspiration; after it, with both spiritual aspiration and a legal international fact. It is because the spiritual aspiration still remains ours, though the legal entity involves not our allegiance, that there is need now for new orientations and new outlooks — fraternity making its gesture from its separate households, co-religionist calling to co-religionists from their respective places of worship.

The fulfilment of the imperatives which stand before us are impossible, as were the achievements which already enter into the record, without the devotion of all our members. That devotion the Canadian Jewish Congress has enjoyed to the full. We were moreover fortunate in that the Jewish community of Canada was able through all these years to muster extremely talented and devoted people for the work undertaken through the many committees.

The talents these people gave was combined in a magnificent display of teamwork resulting in achievements of heroic proportions. Their name is legion and even to indicate to you the names of the leaders from the maritime provinces through Quebec and this province across the prairies to British Columbia, would be a recital taking longer to give than my entire address this evening. I do, however, wish to pay tribute particularly to the members of the National Executive Committee who, acting on the mandate given to them from the Dominion Council which in turn received its mandate from the last Plenary Session, worked so assiduously and with such ability to resolve the many problems and to think out the many plans.

At this point may I pause to recognize the growth of our own Dominion and to note with the satisfaction I share with millions of Canadians that Newfoundland, the oldest crown colony, is now to
